4th European Consultants' Cooperation Forum

Vienna 20 November 2009

Topic Profit and Principles – Ethical ways to sustainable success for consultants

The latent tension between the drive for profits and the respect for ethical values in business increases in times of crisis. Calls for ethical approaches to money making, to trade and to consultancy have grown louder following the obvious failure of strategies aimed solely at increasing profits. Our increasingly global economy however leads us to ask exactly which ethical principles should be seen as such, for the multicultural diversity of our world has particularly important consequences in the realm of applied ethics.

The 4th European Consultants' Cooperation Forum (ECCF) will therefore consider whether internationally active consultants are obliged, can be obliged or should be obliged to obey ethical principles, and if so, which ones.

The list of speakers gives reason to believe that competent and future-orientated answers to these questions will be found; some of these answers will doubtless also be controversial.

The goal of the 4th ECCF will be to create the most accurate picture of the current situation possible, to outline precisely the changes needed, and to draw conclusions that identify ethically acceptable ways as the key to sustainable success for consultants who are active internationally.
